SATURDAY. JUNE 3, 1876.

They Have a Duty to Do. Next Monday night occurs the regular meeting of the village council. The principal business which should occupy the attention of that body is the consideration of the subject of fire protection. It W. R. Stinchcomb, treasurer, an address can be called nothing else but a very of welcome was made by Rev. W. S. Tilfortunate circumsta ice that there is any den, extending to the Institute the hosneed of the consideration of this subject. Had there been a strong south wind there would have been very little of the 'own left to consider about. But as there is, the council should take the matter in hand and act energetically. There should be no delay. We cannot expect to get any new machinery here, even if it be decided to secure some, for several weeks; but there should be some arrangements for the proper repairs and management of the old hand engine, immediately. Put in proper condition, the old engine can be made to do effective work. Because the engine cannot be expected, under the best of circumstances, to do as much work as a properly managed steamer, is no reason that nothing at all should be done with it. A poor machine well managed is often times better than a good one poorly managed. We fear that, had the village been possessed of first-class machinery at the time of the fire, that there still would have been some trouble. It is interest which was wanting, as well as machinery. There to Christ?" as not interest enough to do the best that could have been done with means at our hand. What more, then, could be expected under different circumstances? It is not right to lay all the blame upon either the conneil or the machinery Had the citizens of the place had proper interest in this matter the council would have been forced to take action. It cannot be expected that the council will move much faster than the public sentiment of the people back them. If any organization be perfected, to be successful it must be composed of our business men and property holdersthose who have an interest in the place. If made up of any other class of men the interest will soon flag and die out, and by the time another fire comes we may be in no better condition to meet it than we were last week. Let every citizen ponder over these

To Be Inspected.

BY R. D.

The time is not far distant when this whole coun'ry will be as fine a developed farming region as the most productive of the southern part of the state. Where is now but a wild, uncultivated forest, will soon be developed farms, than which no state can boast better. This must said she liked Wagner's march pretty energy and ambition, are coming to do nice as riding in his palace cars.
